We have received by the Hiko mail, which arrived yesterday morning, the following account of the murder of W. S. Ferguson in Pahranagat Valley on the night of August 25th, by some unknown parties. Mr. Ferguson was just recovering from the wounds inflicted by Cadwill. We are indebted to C. C. Bradley for a full account of the affair:

HIRO, August 27, 1876. Epiron Recond: Our quiet peaceloving community was thrown into a flutter of excitement night before last. As we sat basking in the grateful fumes of the protective smudge a solitary horseman dashed in amongst us, his horse reeking with sweat at every pure, the rider reporting that a man had been killed down the valley. The particulars as far as learned to date are these: Soon after dark on the evening of the 25th W. S. Ferguson, who lives some three miles below town, went out into his corn field near the house to drive out some stock that was destroying his crop. After some thirty minutes his family and two men stopping at the house were startled by the loud report of a gun, followed by an agonized voice crying "Oh my God!" and groans. After searching with a lantern for some time in body of Ferguson was found lying il-t on his back, his right arm shatter and the holes from several balls in his left side. From appearances the party doing the shooting had been concealed in the corn awaiting a favorable opportunity, and when the time arrived made very sure work. Death must have been almost instantaneous. There is nothing as yet to indicate the perpetrator of this dark deed; conjectures are rife, but it seems impossible to fix suspicion upon any one in particular. Mr. Ferguson was a man who had many enemies in the community and who, whether entitied to it or not, bore the reputation of much wrong dealing. Our community is very much shocked at this outrage but while we deeply deplore such bloody work we may learn from it a useful moral lesson: "As ye would that men should do unto you do ye even so unto

EASTERN DISPATCHES.

New York, Aug. 29.-Thurlow Weed speaks highly of Governor Morgan and thinks his nomination insures the success of the Republican ticket in New York.

The atmosphere for hundreds of miles around is impregnated with smoke from forest fires. The moon and stars are obscured. Nearly everybody complains of sore eyes and nostrils. The weather continues dry and warm and the whole region hereabout suffering from drouth.

Prayers for rain were offered in hundreds of churches on Sunday. The science association, sitting at Buffalo, quanimously passed a resolution that gold should be the only standard of value. The Tribune's summarization of Saratoga specials has the following: The delegates to the Democratic State Convention at Saratoga are arriving very slow. Many of them were in Albany yesterday in consultation with Tilden. His choice for nomination for Governor is generally waited for by delegates, and the action of the convention cannot be foreshadowed until the choice is known. Church has declared he will not accept the nomination under any circumstances Railroad teams for the following parties: John Kelly is understood however to favor Church. The St. Lawrence dele-gation favor Hewitt, which is thought to be significant. Dorsheim r maintains the leading position for the nomination. All journals condemn Bret Hart's

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—About 11 o'clock last night a fire broke out in a broom factory on Brannan street, in the southern portion of the city; the neighborhood is closely built up with frame dwellings, stores and manufacturing establishments and before two a. m. the fire had almost completely swept the block bounded by Brannan, Townsend, Third and Fourth streets. The only buildings saved being the fine offices of the Central Pacific Railroad and a few frames of small value, the latter most badly damaged. Over two hundred poor families were turned out of doors; the total loss will probably ag-gregate a half a million dollars. Among the buildings destroyed was the German Hospital, a large brick edifice containing at the time about 70 patients. Owing to the rapid spread of the flames, the inthe rapid spread of the flames, the in-mates were, for a while, in a critical position, but were eventually all re-moved without accident. The fire at one place crossed the north side of Brannan street and the railroad hotel, a large 3 story frame, was completely destroyed. The streets for blocks in the neighbor-hood were littered with household goods and packed with a dense crowd, while all the numerous eminences of the city were covered with spectators. At one were covered with speciators. At one time there was imminent danger that the fire would cross Third street and sweep that portion of the city down to the Pacific Mail dock, but the fire brigade made a stand on that street and checked the flames there. Some of the dwellings destroyed were of a superior character; besides these the principal loss is in the destruction of the hospital, the Railroad Hotel and the box, sash and blind manufactory. No loss of life or serious accidents reported.

During the conflagration last night a fireman named Stewart, fell from a ladder on Brannan street and was instantly killed, his neck being broken. A number of minor accidents were reported, but few of a serious nature.

Stories of Sitting Bull.

From the Helena (M. T.) Independent, Aug. 3.] The Sioux, while baving many tribal relations and dialects, are really divided into two great families, the Dakotas and Tetons. For many generations the Tetons have ruled supreme west of the Missouri River. The word Teton, im-plies People of the Lodges. Tatunka Eyotunka, or Sitting Bull, is at least 46 years of age, has dark brown bair, gray eves, and is five feet nine inches in hight. The Indians call Sitting Bull Hunkisune or the slow one—a generic term applied by way of sarcasm. Sitting Bull speaks only Sionx and Arickaree. On the 16th only Sioux and Arickaree. On the 16th of June Sitting Bull and his bands fell upon General Crook and achieved a partial victory. Runners were immediately dispatched to lukewarm tribes around the agencies to carry the news and drum for recruits. Accordingly a number of young braves left Standing Bock, Cheyenne Agency, Fort Peck Reservation and in Brooklyn and some consequent exjoined Sitting Bull. Before, however,
citement. they could be accepted, they had to pass through the

ORDEAL OF THE SUN DANCE. These ceremonies were held in a wild canyon of the Big Horn Mountains, and a graphic description has been given by W. C. Gooding, a young trader who is studying the aboriginal character. The sun dance commenced on the 18th of June, and from its commencement to the end 200 warrior were not to eat or drink anything. Under shades of cut boughs Sitting Bull and other warriors were gathered to witness the ceremonies. The 200 warriors were ranged around a medicine pole, their bodies blackened with and wearing nothing but a short skirt of buckskin around their loins and eagle feather coronets. They would dance at intervals of half an bour, and were then allowed a short respite until again called out by the tom-tom. A warrior was suspended from the medicine pole by the ends of a lariat fastened to two thorns stuck in the flesh of the back; in each hand he held a long pole, which partially supported him; but every few minutes he would swing the weight of his body upon the lariat in an effort to TRAR THE THORNS PROM HIS PLESH After hanging for three hours in the glaring sun he was cut down and carried away. Another young warrior, who wanted to show what a brave heart he had, lay down on his face and had six thorns put in his back and shoulders; then turned over and had two more put in his breast. Then, rising to his feet, buffalo skulls were fastened to those in his back and a lariat to those in his breast, and he was made fast to the medi cine pole. The tom-tom struck up and the Indians began to dance, and as the skulls tore out of the flesh one by one, Sitting Bull and the chiefs would shout their approbation. Then, bracing back until the lariat pulled his breast out like a woman's, he danced with renewed vigor; and as the thorns tore from his flesh, and as he had demonstrated terrible powers of endurance, the chiefs gave him loud cheers These are the kind of men who are now on the warpath against their hereditary foe, pale face. Is it any wonder that the brave Custer fell before them?

OLD JOE LANE.

But the most notable object of interest we have out in our Western regions, continued Brown of Oregon, his eyes gleaming with devotional fire, is old General Joe Lane. I suppose there are thousands of people in this country familia with his name and record who would swear he was dead, and the young politicians of the present generation manage to get along without mentioning him at all, which is very remarkable, I some-times think, considering what a conspicuous figure he was in American politics twenty years ago. Indiana idolized bim. No man ever received such an ovation for services in the field as Joe Lane when he returned from Mexico at the close of the war, and gave the State chance to carry him on its shoulders for his gallantry at Buna Vista. He came West in 1856 [1852], was appointed Pro-visional Gowenor of Oregon by Fill-more, then was in the Senate, and had just finished his term when the Charleston Convention recognized his radical pro-slavery opinions by placing him on the ticket with Breckinridge. After that defeat he came back to us is disgust, and the hot political places that once knew him will know him no more forever. He bought a farm back of Roseburg, running up from the valley of the Willamette, and built him a small frame house high up on a picturesque spur of the Rogue River Mountains, where he has lived ever since in the most perfect seclusion. Two years ago he ost his wife, whom he always called "the Madam," and loved devotedly Since then his desolation has been re lieved only by a negro boy, who cooks and keeps house for him. Infirm! you ought to see him. He is 83 now, straight as an arrow, six feet two in height, and he can pick up his rifle and bring home a deer, or follow down a trout stream over the rocks about as well as the next man. And then he reads a great deal One room in his cabin is sacred to his books, and his library is one of the most valuable on the Pacific Slope. Strange how the old man hangs on to the skirts of the past! Old thoughts, old questions, old scenes, old statesmen which have nearly faded out of our remembrance and given place to the issues and plans of the present are ment, drink and lodging to him. The new thoughts of an ever-busy and progressive race he cares very little about, comparatively, and seems to have made up his mind that the country is retrograding. He talks about ancient nations of political honor and integrity, and any comparison with the present turns him sick at the stomsch. Only once lately we got him worked up to the point of coming down from his garret in the clouds and making a speech It was on the 4th of June, at Roseburg, just as we were getting ready to leave for We circulated in every St. Louis. direction, and people came over the mountains to hear him, taking three or four days for the journey. There were at least five thousand there, and when the old hero began the auditors stretched their necks as if some revelation was coming, and every word was to be precious. Only a few could hear bim, for his voice has drifted into the childish treble, but curiosity kept them spelland orchestra, only few rows, purchased bound until he closed. He reminded one, with his majestic appearance and flowing white hair and beard, of some John the Baptist in the wilderness crying unto the people to "Repent!" And when he came down from the platform he took us delegates to one side, and begged us, with faltering voice and tears in his eyes, to give the country a pure ticket, and help bring back the honesty and deconcy which politics had lost, and the country wanted to see re stored. "The boys," for that's the name he calls us by, look up to him with great veneration, and think there is still more eloquence in those weak trembing tones than in all modern ora-
